

Malki - Ballena Press

Malki Museum Hosts A Lecture On

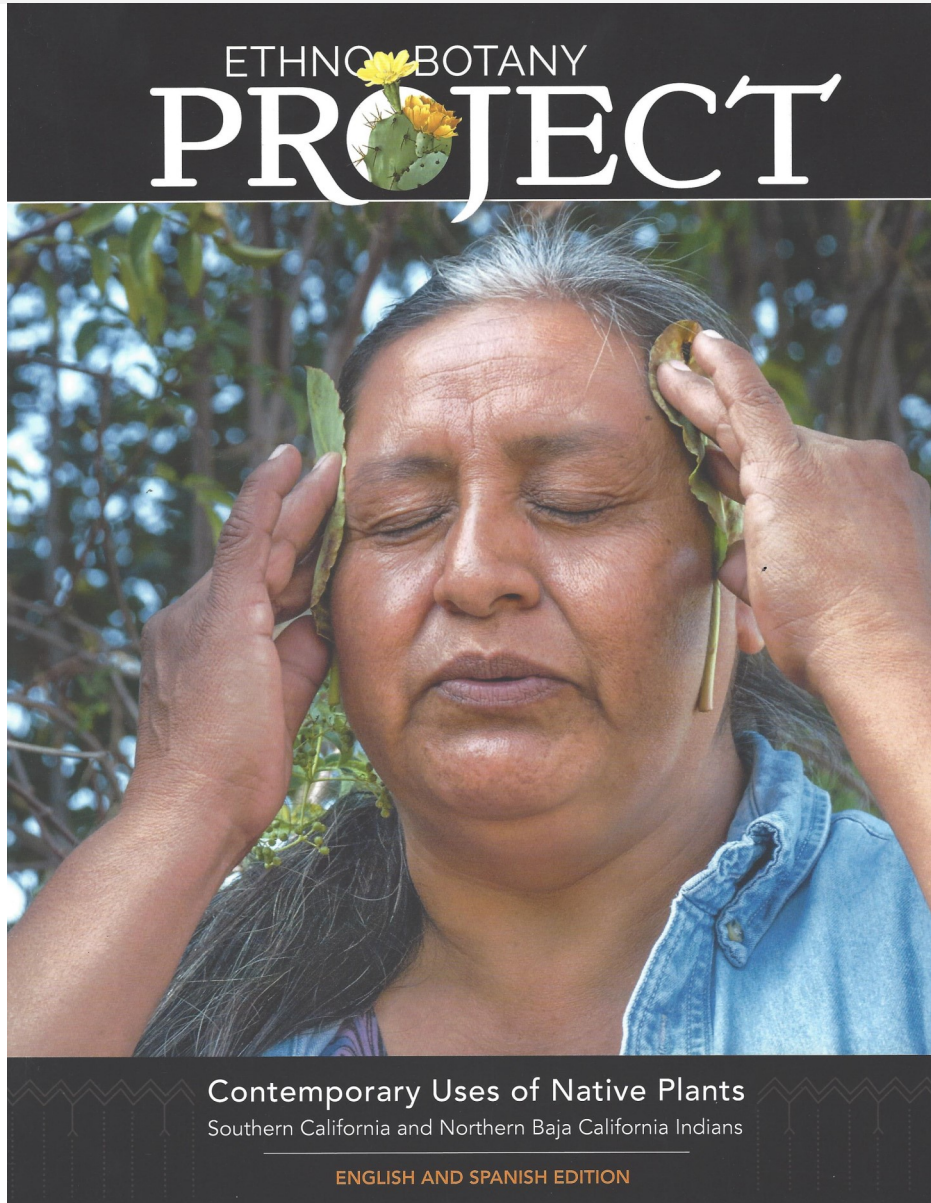

The Ethnobotany Project:

Contemporary Uses of Native Plants

Presented By Authors

Rose Ramirez and Deborah Small

Saturday - July 28, 2018 ||| 12:00 PM—2:00 PM

The Ethnobotany Project documents the contemporary uses of native plants of profound importance to the intellectual, spiritual and cultural vitality of California Indian people, from the Chumash territories to the Paipai and Kiliwa territories in Baja California. Every page contains a storehouse of knowledge in the voices of our collaborators: Barbara Drake, Lorene Sisquoc, and Teresa Castro among others. The Ethnobotany Project offers us the opportunity to learn from people whose ancestors were here for thousands of years, living in sustainable and ecologically viable communities.

For more information call the Malki Museum at 951-849-7289

or email us at

MalkiMuseumMail@Gmail.com